Greenfield is a suburban community of Milwaukee, population 38,000.

The City of Greenfield is striving to become a more pollinator-friendly community. They created a volunteer-based Pollinator Protection Committee that is dedicated to promoting pollinator-friendly programs, projects and best practices. The City is also encouraging pollinator/nectar gardens on private properties, converting public lands to pollinator habitats, providing education to the public about butterfly conservation and has plans to host a Monarch & Pollinator Celebration Day in 2020. Additionally, they have committed to revising lawn mowing practices, where possible.

What solidly impresses MCUSA is the community's dedication to making a better home for the monarch butterfly. Thank you for joining and we wish you all well.
